Mr. W. J. Hibberd, of Grayswood School, Haslemere, gave an interesting lecture to the members of the Guildford Wireless Society at their headquarters on Monday evening. His remarks were illustrated with apparatus of his own making. Mr. Hibberd is the possessor of a transmitting outfit, and will be transmitting at 10 o'clock to-night (Saturday) for the benefit of Guildford amateurs.

SCHOOLBOYS AND THEIR WIRELESS

This is the wireless aerial of the village school at Grayswood, in Sussex, made out of an old windmill. As already mentioned in the C.N., this school has its wireless apparatus by which it receives time signals from the Eiffel Tower in Paris and other messages, and these are chalked up on the blackboard as they arrive
